About Me

My journey with `< code />` started about three years ago when I was asked to create an event marketing email. This experience sparked my curiosity and interest in the world of coding. As I continued to dive deeper, I decided to join the HackerYou bootcamp program.

I'm always curious about finding different solutions to a coding problem, learning new frameworks and turning ideas into code. I'm excited about the possibilities of creating art through code using modern CSS and Javascript.
